

Nervous Clients

Sedation for an easy smile

We completely understand how nervous people can feel about dental treatment. For many people, talking through the treatment, understanding that you are in control and that we will work at your pace is often a great help.

For some people dental treatment is a real phobia, you may not have visited a dentist for many years and may need a significant amount of treatment. Here at Stoke Bishop Dental Centre the team is experienced in the treatment of nervous clients and has successfully treated a wide range of nervous patients over many years. We have the facilities and training to provide intravenous sedation, which has replaced general anaesthesia in dental practice. Sedation reduces the apparent length of the treatment and makes you unaware of the details of the procedure. This means that dentally anxious people can get the smile they have always wanted with less stress.

There are few after effects of this type of treatment and you can usually go home within two hours of beginning treatment. Years of problems can be corrected in just a few visits.

Benefits

- Less awareness of dental treatment whilst it is occurring.
- Little or no memory of treatment once the session has been completed.
- Healthier teeth and a better smile with less stress.

Sedation for Implant procedures

Sedation is also helpful for any client planning to undergo a lengthy procedure and we would normally recommend sedation for implant procedures.

Case Study

A new smile really can mean a new you. If you have a great smile you'll smile more and research shows that people who smile more are perceived as being more confident and more attractive. This lady had a smile makeover with the benefits of sedation at Stoke Bishop Dental Centre in Bristol and she is now a life coach and fitness instructor.

If you want to boost your confidence and perhaps put the clock back a few years, come and speak to us about a smile makeover.
